

When people whirred past on their in-line skates or riding their bicycles, Piper wanted to chase the fast-moving wheels and bark at them.

“Piper! Stay!” Mr. Duncan commanded, and made her stop in her tracks by tightening her leash.

Piper didn’t understand why she couldn’t play the chase game when people on wheels flew by her, because that’s what hunting dogs do naturally. But Mr. Duncan always reeled her in and made her stand quietly while the people went past them. After awhile, Piper learned to obey
