

Chapter 7

PIPER'S COMPUTER LESSON

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan's son, Mark, and his wife, Karen, also lived in the same city, and came to visit often. Piper knew that these two people were part of her family, too. She knew their names, and even the sound of their car's motor when they drove up to the house. Piper always greeted Mark and Karen as if she hadn't seen them for a hundred years, even though it had been just a few days.

When Mrs. Duncan installed a computer in a basement workroom, Mark came to teach his mother how to operate her new machine. Now most puppy dogs weren't interested in such things, but Piper was an unusually curious dog. She had to poke her little black nose into
